

Lets face it. Ministry to men is not easy. Like trying to herd cats. We need as many resources and ideas and support as we can get.

With over 6,000 churches in the state and very few of them having an effective men's ministry, the need is great. Many of the churches that have a few men meeting together have no larger vision and feel a certain isolation that comes from the separated nature of todays denominational culture. We want to begin to build a statewide network of men's ministry leaders.

Envision a day where there are ministry "Outposts" across the state that are each mentoring and supporting the churches in their area to reach the men of their congregations. Envision a day where men travel between churches to support their brothers at a ministry event they've organized.