

Chesapeake Habitat for Humanity is proud to work with our neighbors to rehabilitate simple, decent, affordable houses--something that could not be done without the service of our many willing volunteers. We welcome people from all walks of life and invite individual and group volunteers from every faith, denomination, race and economic status to join us in our mission to end substandard housing in Baltimore.

While the most popular volunteer request involves helping on the construction site, CHFH has equally vital volunteer opportunities outside of construction. Volunteers are asked to contribute their time and talents helping in the office and in our warehouse, serving on committees, preparing lunches, helping to staff tables at volunteer fairs and events, and performing outreach in the community to help raise money and awareness.

Each year dozens of businesses, faith-based groups, professional organizations and school/youth groups, come together to make the dream of safe, affordable homeownership a reality with and for our partner families.
